Ofsted...

Pupils are proud to be part of this inclusive community. They feel safe when they are in school. They know who to speak to if they are worried or upset. Pupils enjoy good, warm relationships with staff and leaders.

The school is ambitious for all pupils. Staff are determined that pupils, including those who are disadvantaged and those with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND), gain the knowledge and skills that they need to thrive in their future lives. In many subjects, pupils achieve well.

Teachers are knowledgeable about their subjects. They have benefited from professional development sessions, which have introduced them to a wide range of effective teaching strategies to use in the classroom. They apply these well in their lessons.

The school identifies pupils with SEND accurately. It has provided staff with training on the most appropriate methods to support these pupils in lessons. Pupils with SEND progress well through the same ambitious curriculum as their peers because staff are effective in adapting their teaching to the needs of pupils.

Pupils follow a very well-designed programme of lessons and activities to promote their personal development. A multitude of opportunities are woven through the curriculum and through the school's extensive and inclusive enrichment programme. These opportunities help pupils to blossom into well-rounded and confident individuals.
